a heritage of quality,
a history of innovation

Long before there was air conditioning – or even widespread use of electricity – people around the world counted on Hunter ceiling fans for cool comfort.

The father and son team of John and James Hunter created their first ceiling fan in 1886. The earliest Hunter fans were actually water driven. A short time later, Hunter introduced an electrically powered ceiling fan. It was one of the first products ever to run on electricity.

Today, Hunter combines this heritage of 19th century craftsmanship with the 21st century technology to create ceiling fans that are unmatched for quality, style and quiet performance. And more than 120 years after the invention of the very first Hunter ceiling fan, our name and our products are still a comfort to millions.

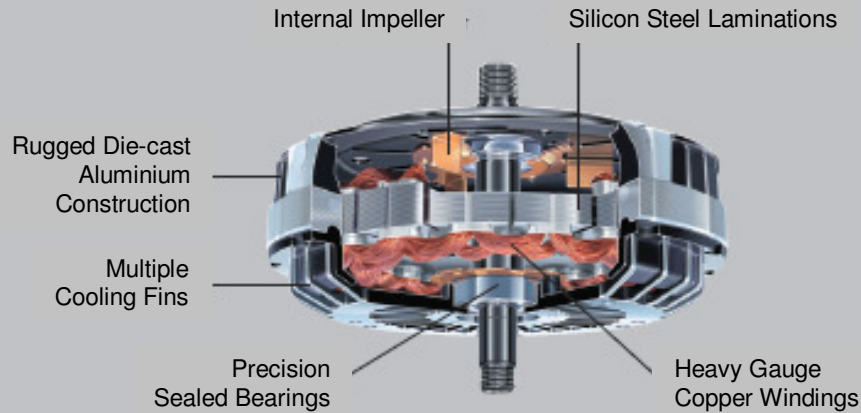

i n n o v a t i o n . . .

Hunter Fan Company continues to lead the industry with innovation.

The AirMax® Motor

Hunter fans are powered by our patented AirMax® Motor – the quietest, most powerful, most durable motor we've ever created. Quietly cooling your home for a lifetime.

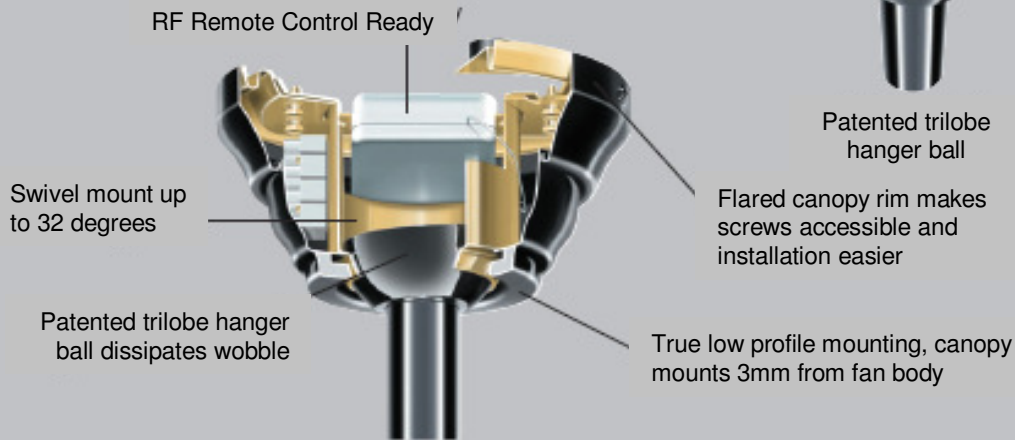

WobbleFree™ Canopy

For a lifetime of wobble-free operation, Hunter introduces the WobbleFree™ canopy. Our patented trilobular-shaped hanger ball dissipates the wobble that many fans experience.

Patented trilobe hanger ball

e n e r g y e f f i c i e n t

Summer Cooling

- Saves up to 40% on air conditioning
- Saves energy by using air conditioner less and at higher temperatures

Winter Heat Reclamation

- Energy savings of up to 24%
- Reclaims lost heat from ceiling

In cold weather, operate the fan in the slow speed, REVERSE direction. This creates a gentle updraft, which recirculates the hot air trapped at the ceiling to provide even, comfortable heat throughout your room. The recirculation of warm air allows you to lower the room's thermostat setting, resulting in energy savings of 24% or more.

In a given room temperature of 20-24 degree Celsius, each degree increase/decrease corresponds to 6% of your heating costs. Considering an 18 degree average temperature at floor level and 27 degree temperature at ceiling level, your fan will recirculate the air to reach a 22 degree room temperature.*

the elements of style

Rich woods. Enduring metals. Lustrous, hand applied finishes. Artfully crafted glass. Architectural details. These are some of the many finely crafted elements that come together beautifully in the Hunter line of quality ceiling fans.

Considered individually, these elements are truly impressive.

An array of high quality natural materials are used, from the real wicker of the Caribbean Breeze™ to the stately Sawala wood of the Salinas™. Careful attention is paid to wood grain and grade in order to create fans that are worthy of being called fine furnishings. Wood finishes range from the rich walnut blades of the Original™, to the aged look of the 1886™, with its distressed blade finish. All veneers are furniture quality.

Metals and metal finishes reflect a dedication to quality and stylistic diversity. Finishes such as the bright brass found on our Original™ update the warmth and grace of a bygone heritage. Contemporary finishes on fans like the Alchemy™ offer a sunny, new world flair that's at home in a contemporary loft or apartment or a beach cottage. Available on models as diverse as the traditional Builders Select™ and the ultra contemporary Lugano™, brushed nickel offers a satin sleekness. And the real cast iron of our 1886 Series® delivers lasting authenticity.

Beautiful glass adds another dimension to our models. The linen glass found on the Valhalla™ blends a fired texture with water glass to produce a soft white light. The modern Manadaly™ dual light option gives complete flexibility to the Industrie™, Tribeca™ and Avalon™ fans.

Of course, Hunter fans are beautiful on the inside as well. Throughout all the International fan families, you'll discover Hunter technology breakthroughs that virtually eliminate wobble, make installation a snap and ensure whisper-quiet performance. As well as this, almost all fan motors are covered by a lifetime warranty.

From lustrous polished finishes to the latest high-tech innovations, Hunter knows that true prestige comes from paying attention to every detail. Stunning style. Unmatched quality. And unrivaled craftsmanship. That's the beauty of Hunter.
