

Installing Confidence for over 75 Years

FROM humble beginnings manufacturing school laboratory fittings in Sydney in the 1930's to providing specialist solutions for hospitals in the 60's and later expanding to thermostatic mixing valves in the mid 90's, Enware is now one of Australia's most trusted makers of commercial tapware and safety systems. A true Australian success story that employs over 180 staff.

The desire to develop and deliver customised solutions through a flexible manufacturing plant has always been at the heart of Enware. Throughout the 75 years they have earned the reputation for durable, fit for purpose products that perform in demanding applications such as:

- Hospitals and Aged Care
- Schools and Universities
- Laboratories
- Commercial Kitchens
- Prisons
- Public and Council Amenities

Adam Degnan, Managing Director, recognises the importance of support from key architects, consultants and experts within the industry that play a major part on Enware's success. These relationships have given Enware deeper insight into specialised applications, developing bespoke plumbing solutions and standard ranges for all purposes.

In this 75 year celebration Enware is taking a look back, thanking those that have supported them throughout the years. With a continuous commitment to working together and providing insightful solutions that can be installed with confidence.
